Re: Jane Smith

To whom it may concern

I understand Jane Smith wishes to access legal aid for a family dispute as a victim of domestic violence. For this reason, I have been asked to provide a letter in accordance with regulation 33 and schedule 1 of the Civil Legal Aid (Procedure) Regulations 2012 (as amended).

I can confirm that our organisation is situated in England and Wales and has been operating for an uninterrupted period of six months or more.

I can confirm that we have provided Jane Smith with support in relation to their needs as a victim, or person at risk, of domestic violence.

In my reasonable professional judgement Jane Smith is, or is at risk of being, a vicim of domestic violence.

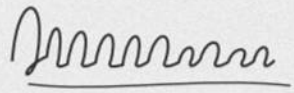

The matters I have relied upon to support that judgement are:

- Jane has told me that her ex would tell her about all the local mums he had slept with. When she did not respond he would tell her he hoped she dies in her sleep.
- Jane has told me her ex was extremely controlling, his anger and controlling behaviour would get out of control and he would be shouting, calling her names and would belittle her.
- Jane has told me that her ex did not like her working, he used to say how he did not liker her work colleagues or friends. He would say they were toxic and negative. She was not allowed to discussion anything to do with work in the home and she was prevented from discussing her home life in work.
- She has told me that he made it clear he did not like her friends and would say they were toxic. He would check her phone daily and read her messages and question her about them. Jane stopped interacting with her friends and family as it was easier to not receive any to avoid being questioned and him getting angry and abusive. She felt isolated as a result.
- Jane said she always felt on edge. She told me she lost herself trying to please him so he would not get angry or abusive with her in the home.
- Jane has told me how her ex would demand sec and give her the silent treatment if she said no. Jane said that in the end he would ignore that she had said not to him. He would often want sex when she was asleep and ignore that she was asleep.
- Jane has told me that he attended a funeral and afterwards drunk and smashed the house up which was witnessed by their daughter.

We have provided Jane Smith the following support: Helpline support and advice, including risk assessment, followed by ongoing attendance and engagement in a programme specialising in group support for recovery of adults who have experienced domestic abuse.

Jane Smith needed this support because they were identified as a victim of domestic abuse.

Yours faithfully,
